

There is no clear evidence that cell phone use in air will not interfere with navigational equipment on the aircraft. Terrorists will be able to coordinate hijacks and information about flight crew activities during flight by phone and or e-mail. Will make an already stressful environment more so, and make the flight attendants job much more difficult in emergency situations and the "policing" of cell phone use.